INVESTMENT MANAGER'S REPORT

For the period ended 30 June 2014

The Aspect Diversified Trends Fund (the "Fund"), as represented by the Class A (USD) Shares of the Fund, produced a return of -0.22% for the period from 1 January 2014 to 30 June 2014.

January 2014

The Fund started 2014 with a loss of -5.66% in January. The major drivers of the Fund's performance were losses from predominantly long equities exposure which overwhelmed the small profits from the sector's few short positions. Early in the month, poor payroll data in the United States exacerbated concerns about the economic recovery there. Later, weak Chinese PMI data and Argentina's rapid Peso devaluation triggered an emerging markets sell-off which became a global equity market retracement. Emerging market currencies also experienced sharp moves, and the Fund profited from some short positions here. However, the currencies sector was dragged into negative territory as the Yen reversed its trend, buoyed by safe-haven buying. Performance in fixed income markets was a function of the Fund's mixed positioning. Generally falling yields meant profits from long positions in Japanese and Eurozone bonds, but losses from the predominantly short positions elsewhere, most notably in UK Gilts following low inflation figures and in Canada following dovish comments from the Bank of Canada. In commodities, oil prices fell early in the month on speculation that supplies from Libya would recover, but the Fund's long natural gas exposure profited from cold weather and the resulting draws on stockpiles. The emerging markets concerns weighed on industrial metals prices, hurting long positions in all markets except aluminium. However, agricultural markets performed well as bearish trends continued in wheat and sugar.

February 2014

The Fund returned 1.58% in February. Global equity markets climbed higher despite heightened anxieties surrounding the situation in Ukraine. The new Fed Chairperson, Janet Yellen, initially pledged to maintain her predecessor's policies by scaling back stimulus in measured steps. However, a slew of weaker US labour data, partly blamed on recent adverse weather conditions, saw the Fed change course slightly and reassure markets that it would consider pulling back on the tapering schedule if the economy slowed in a meaningful manner. The Fund thus made gains from its net long exposure to stock indices. The US Dollar weakened and this led to gains from the Fund's net short dollar exposures particularly against the New Zealand Dollar, British Pound and Swiss Franc. The Fund also made gains in fixed income as investors generally sought the safety of bonds towards the end of the month. Slowing inflation numbers in the Eurozone further provided support to bond prices in particular in Italy. Commodities advanced in February as the escalating tension in Ukraine fuelled concern that energy and grain supplies will be disrupted, and increased demand for gold and silver as safe haven assets. Coffee, sugar and the soy complex rallied as drought affected Brazil, the world's biggest exporter of these crops. The Fund made gains from long exposures to energies and to the soy contracts but incurred losses from short exposures to wheat, softs and precious metals.

March 2014

The Fund returned -1.68% in March. Commodity sectors were the main drivers of the Fund's performance. Long positions in oil markets suffered as prices fell on expectations that supply from Iraq will more than offset any potential disruptions from Libya and Ukraine. Natural gas prices also declined following mild weather forecasts in the USA, and long zinc positions struggled amid concerns about industrial activity in China. In agricultural markets, the best performers were lean hogs, where a virus outbreak drove prices higher, and soy markets which also rose on concerns about tighter supplies in the USA. However, losses came from short positions in wheat amid concerns that the Ukrainian situation will threaten supplies. The tension in Ukraine also drove risk aversion in financial markets, and this initially combined with weak economic data from China to depress stock markets. However, as concerns about Ukraine later eased and rumours emerged of a Chinese stimulus package, stock markets partially recovered and the sector finished the month close to flat. The best sectors overall were bonds and currencies. The Ukrainian uncertainty drove increased demand for European bonds, benefiting the Fund's long positions, and in currency markets an interest rate hike by the Reserve Bank of New Zealand and a large increase in the country's trade surplus boosted the New Zealand Dollar.

April 2014

The Fund returned 1.66% in April. As the US economy broadly showed strength and resilience, the Fed continued to reduce the pace of its asset purchases as planned. Meanwhile, the ECB came under pressure to consider its own bond purchase plan as inflation dwindled in the Eurozone. Geopolitical tensions surrounding

April 2014 (continued)

Ukraine and the ensuing sanctions on some Russian controlled enterprises drove many commodity markets higher while core European bonds were also sought as potential safe haven assets. The Fund made gains in most sectors. In fixed income, long exposures in particular to longer dated European, North American and Japanese bonds dominated the gains. With the UK growing at the fastest pace amongst G7 economies the expectations for interest rate hikes are mounting. As a result, the Fund made small losses from longs in UK rates but in the currencies sector its long Sterling position was rewarded. Despite the Fund also making gains from capturing strengthening emerging market currencies such as the Korean Won and Brazilian Real, reversals in the Japanese Yen, Canadian and New Zealand Dollars reduced the sector's profits. It was commodity exposures which delivered some of the best performances for the Fund this month. Bullish US natural gas inventory data rewarded the long positioning there. The soy complex also continued to make gains as the effects of poor North and South American harvests drove prices higher. Finally, long exposures to nickel made gains as the combination of an Indonesian ore export ban and sanctions on large Russian ore producers drove the price higher.

May 2014

The Fund finished May with a profit of 2.39%. In what was a strong month for both stock indices and government bond markets around the globe, it was long positions in these two sectors which provided the bulk of the Fund's profits. The main factor influencing the continued decline in government bond yields was growing expectation that there would be further policy easing from the ECB in the near future. The Fund saw profits from long positions in European Bonds, and also from other regions. Stock indices rallied towards the end of the month as positive economic data in the United States helped improve investor sentiment and market uncertainty declined, helping the Fund's predominantly long positions here. Other sectors saw more varied performances. Profits in the metals sector came from short gold and silver positions and from the long nickel position where supply disruption pushed prices higher. However, these were offset by losses from short copper positions as Chinese economic reforms improved demand forecasts. Performance in agriculturals was also mixed as shorts in wheat and soybean oil profited but cotton and lean hogs prices saw pullbacks. Natural gas was the source of losses in energies as both stock levels in North America and the weather outlook started to improve. Currencies delivered mixed results: recent rallies in Sterling and the New Zealand Dollar lost momentum, but there were profits from longs in the Norwegian Krone and also in the Indian Rupee following the election of a new government.

June 2014

The Fund returned 1.73% in June. Actions by central banks were the principal drivers of market activity. In bonds, the Fund profited from its long exposures in all regions except for the US and the UK. The European Central Bank's decision to set deposit rates to negative, in an effort to boost lending in the region, saw European bonds and global equities rally. Equity markets were further boosted by favourable US labour, housing and inflation data but US treasuries sold off. In the UK, the Bank of England suggested that rates may start rising sooner than markets expect. This caused Sterling to rally, to the benefit of the Fund's long positioning but resulted in losses on long positions in UK fixed income. Elsewhere in currencies, the New Zealand Dollar resumed its rally following a hawkish Reserve Bank of New Zealand statement. The worst performing currency was the Fund's long exposure to the Norwegian Krone, which sold off following comments from Norges Bank that it is prepared to cut interest rates. Losses incurred on short positions in gold and silver resulted in metals being the worst performing sector in June. Precious metal prices rallied after the World Bank cut its global growth outlook. As well as further increasing the appeal of gold and silver, the escalating violence in Iraq also boosted the price of crude oil. In agriculturals the Fund made strong gains from its shorts in wheat amid easing concerns over global supplies. The Fund's long exposure to live cattle also made gains as tight supplies in that market drove prices to all-time highs. Longs in soy markets detracted from these gains however as prices declined following reports of increased acreage in the US.

5. FINANCIAL DERIVATIVE INSTRUMENTS

Open forward foreign exchange contracts

The Company engages in forward foreign exchange contracts to protect non base currency classes against fluctuations in foreign currency exchange rates. Forward foreign exchange contracts will be valued by reference to the forward price at which a new forward contract of the same size and maturity could be undertaken at the valuation date. The unrealised gain or loss on open forward foreign exchange contracts is calculated as the difference between the contract rate and this forward price, and are recognised in the Statement of Comprehensive Income. Where a forward contract is purchased to hedge the currency risk of a specific class which is issued in a currency other than the base currency of the Fund, all gains and losses on that contract are allocated to that class. As at 30 June 2014 and 31 December 2013 all forward foreign exchange contracts were purchased to hedge the currency risk of non-based currency classes.

As at 30 June 2014 the Company had contracted to buy and sell the following amounts:

Total return swaps

The total return swaps held by the Fund represented an agreement whereby the Fund did not pay the full value or notional value of the agreed underlying reference assets on the date of entry into the total return swaps, but instead pledged by way of security in favour of the counterparties a set percentage of their full value or notional value (known as margin). On certain pre-agreed dates during the term of the total return swaps the Fund (i) received the gain or paid the loss of the performance of the underlying reference assets (ii) paid an interest rate payment which was equal to the funding cost of holding the underlying reference assets and (iii) paid a fee. On maturity the margin amounts were released from the security arrangement and delivered back to the Fund. The Fund ceased using this instrument on 13 December 2013 to gain exposure to the Index and instead it obtains exposure to the Programme through investing in Certificates as set out in 2 (i).

6. EFFICIENT PORTFOLIO MANAGEMENT

The Company does not engage in efficient portfolio management as defined by ESMA's guidelines on ETFs and other UCITS. Note that, as set out above, the Fund does enter into forward foreign exchange contracts for the purposes of share class hedging.

In accordance with the Prospectus, for dealing purposes, costs of establishment are amortised on a straight line basis over a period of up to 5 years. Total costs of establishment amounted to US$320,244, of which US$95,977 remained outstanding on the fund as at 30 June 2014 (31 December 2013: US$127,472).
